

Troy Planning Commission To Promote Development Of Vacant Land

STUDENTS OF R.P.I. TO LEND HAND IN COMMUNITY PLAN

Will Study Proposals For Both Residential And Industrial Uses

Included in the master plan for the development of Troy which the Troy Planning Commission is now working on will be suggestions for the development of various undeveloped tracts of land throughout the city.

City Engineer Ralph G. Champagne has been requested by the planning commission to prepare a map showing all the undeveloped areas of the city.

Once the map is prepared and turned over to the commission, students in community planning courses at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute will begin working with the commission on the project.

The R.P.I. students will study the undeveloped sections and will present suggestions and plans for use of the land as part of their classwork at the Institute.

In addition the commission will also gather information concerning the available water and sewer lines in the areas, including the cost and problems involved in installing such services.

The city engineer pointed out that the work done by the R.P.I. students will be of assistance not only to the planning commission but also to the owners of undeveloped land. The recommendations will be available to the owners of such tracts, Mr. Champagne said.

The study will give the commission a guide as to what sections should be used for residential development and which should be used for industrial purposes.

Work on the undeveloped lands is the second phase of the writing of a master plan to guide the city's future development.

Earlier this month, Prof. Ralph E. Winslow, commission chairman, named a committee to study and recommend the development of parking areas in an effort to relieve traffic and parking congestion.

AUXILIARIES MEET—Persons who have volunteered for auxiliary police service for civilian defense met last night at the Troy K.C. rooms to receive their first briefing. Above, Edwin F. Livingstone, city defense director, addresses the group.

GRANGE PLANS FOR STATE CONVENTION

Five Delegates Named By County Group

Rensselaer County Pomona Grange conducted its third quarterly meeting this week at the Brunswick Grange Hall and made plans for the annual New York State Convention to be held Oct. 29 through Nov. 2 at Syracuse. Ralph Griswald, master, presided at the business session.

Allen Hayner was reelected to the executive committee for a three-year term and Mrs. Anna Miller was appointed to the serving and hospitality committee for the same period.

It was announced that the various winners of the county contests will compete for state honors at the Syracuse conclave. Those who will compete are Mrs. Mary Rudel, chocolate cake winner; Sharon Sherman, juvenile wild flower winner, and Gene Watt, soap carving contest winner.

A hobby exhibit was conducted under the supervision of Mrs. Dorothy Filkins, lecturer.

Delegates chosen to attend the state convention were Mr. Griswald, Mrs. George Krough, Mrs. Bernard Hayner, Fred Lemke and Harold Trebble.

A past master's jewel was presented to Wilbur Bower at the conclusion of the meeting.

CUTS CIGARETTES.

For persons who want a short smoke, a new cigarette cutter has two small flat pieces of metal, one of which slides over the other in side grooves. One piece has a hole through which a cigarette is inserted, the other a V-shaped cutting edge.

MARINE RECRUITER INSPECTS TROY SITE

Major Makes Trip To Visit Station

Maj. Richard N. Aufmann, newly assigned officer in charge of Marine Corps district headquarters recruiting station at Albany, made his first inspection of the Troy Marine Recruiting Station at the Court House today.

The local recruiting station, in charge of S/Sgt. Albert E. Friedman, was visited by both Major Aufmann and Capt. W. O. Westfield, assistant recruiting officer of the district headquarters.

Major Aufmann recently returned to the United States from Korea where he had served with the 11th Marines since July 1950.

A native of Chicago, he enlisted in the Marine Corps as a private in 1939. In January, 1941 he went to Pearl Harbor with the 1st Defense Battalion. Returning to the United States in 1943 for a course in weapons, he again embarked for overseas in January, 1944 with the 17th Seacoast Artillery Battalion.

He was with the 10th Marines as an observer in the invasion of Saipan, then served on Guam until the surrender of the Japanese. He was stationed in the United States from November 1945 until going to Korea. His decorations include the Purple Heart, Korean Campaign, Presidential Unit Citation and the United Nations Ribbon.
