

Kid Sister Singing Star

NEW YORK (UPI) — Lyn Christopher began taking singing lessons at the age of 10 but didn't blossom as an artist until she was 24.

It's partly Miss Christopher's fault because she got herself involved in pushing other artists' records. While working for a major record company as a publicist, she built up a telephone relationship with disc jockeys as "Mom."

Those around her recognized her talent as a singer and urged her to start promoting herself.

The result is her first album, "Lyn Christopher" (Paramount PAS 6061).

Miss Christopher, a natural beauty who could make a living modeling magazine covers, has a pleasant voice with a good range and change of pace.

Songs range from Buffy St. Marie's "She Used to Wanna Be a Ballerina" to Neil Diamond's soothing "Canta Libre," which is woven around a Chopin composition.

Among other songs are Randy Newman's "I Don't Want to Hear It Anymore," Gary Bonner's "Celebrate I and II" and Al Kooper's "Unrequited."
